LOUIS POTTER DEAD; WAS BISHOP'S COUSIN AND NOTED SCULPTOR

Cause of His Death.

Henry C. Potter of New York and a Potter, who stopped in Seattle ten days

Louis Potter, whose individualistic style, somewhat resembling that of the great Rodin, has made his name a prominent one in the studios and museums on "Oh, he's a fellow who would both sides of the Atlantic, was born in daughter Myrtie, if he had one."

Troy. Nov. 14, 1873, the son of Louis and Mary McClellan Potter. He graduated from Trinity College with the degree of A. B. in 1894, studied painting under Charles N. and Montague Flagg in this city and then went to Paris to spend four years in the atellers of Luc-Oliver, Merson and Jean Dampt.

His first exhibition of sculpture was made in the Paris Solon in 1899, and he entered examples of his work in the Parls Exposition of 1900, the St. Louis Exposition in 1904, the Roman Exposi-Despatch From Seattle Says tion of 1911 and in various other expositions of sculpture in this country and abroad. His group, "Earth-Bound," a herote collection of figures representing age lifting the burden of life from a child's shoulders, was one of the fea-tures of the first Child's Welfare Exposition in this city a year ago. "Hand of God" was another of his old of the death in that city of masterpleces which attracted universal uis Potter, a cousin of the late Bishop Praise. He spent some time in Utah modelling busts of Bringham Young, Prophet Smith and other leaders of the ster, who stopped in Seattle ten days of Mormon faith; a bust of Mark Twain to during the course of a tour of the was also modelled by him. Many of West, is said to have succumbed under the treatment by a Chinese physician for a minor skin disease of long standing.

According to the despatch from the Wastern city the cause of the sculptor's death has not yet been determined and the Coroner is making a complete investigation. Fourth avenue.
